The following is my second review of the revised manuscript, " Software Design Concerns Associated with Simulating Multiple Inheritance in Java for Implementation Purposes"- 2014_BJMCS_15476. The revised paper has met all of my previous concerns. It makes a valuable contribution to the literature and it is of value to the readers of "British Journal of Mathematics & Computer Science". The authors have assembled a relevant, rigorous and contemporary literature review. The previously mentioned strengths of the manuscript suggest that the paper can be considered to be of high quality and also be of sufficient value to the readership of "BJMCS". Therefore, based on the foregoing discussion, I would recommend that this paper be accepted, as is.
