

Editorial Comments:

I reviewed the article and I found it in good standing. Two questions and recommendations:

1- Authors started their introduction with the experience. This is good but following 2-3 pages hardly have any citations. Perhaps, they include few citations to back some of the paragraphs on the first few pages of their introduction.

2 - Authors showed the standard deviation or error bar on their time scale monitoring for noise. What is n equal at each point? When they take the average, average of no what?

Author's Feedback:

The first recommendation on the inclusion of citation to back up some of the paragraphs on the first few pages of the article has been effected. This has also reflected in my references.

The second recommendation on the noise generation result at each point has been given. Also average of noise generation at each study area, average noise generation of the five markets and the total average of noise was also provided.
