| Optional/General comments    | The article has contributed to theoretical postulations regarding women economic empowerment as a case study. However, it lacks some ingredients that will make the findings generalized such as: inadequate sample, analysis restriction to descriptive only; lack most current literature to sequence of trends and less than 15 citations. | Sample number was fixed as per availability of coir industries in the particular study area. We have included current literatures as per suggestions. However, so such earlier literature in Assam context with similar background is available. |
