The paper still has some structural problems. E.g., it fails to report the key findings of the questionnaire. So, it is unclear why the author is trying to publish internationally something that would be more appropriate for a national report. There is no scientific method applied, hence, the paper is just the narration of a story of a very basic technology transfer scheme. There are still several typos and problems in written English.	Comments on Problems in written English is accepted and modified. Regarding the report, the research follows scientific steps from the site selection to data analysis and reporting. Although the report did not use any model, because the collected data was qualitative, it is a best practice and the recommendation made were applied recommendation for concerning stakeholders.
