| Compulsory REVISION comments | The article has a lot of grammatical and editing problems. For example, sentences are not well coordinated, especially in the introduction. I will therefore suggest a language editor. The author must choose which type of intext referencing style he/she must use, not using the two together. The author must also substantiate his assertions with enough literature support. For example, he said, 'Also, with a depleting resource base and with stagnating productivity in irrigated areas, so it's clear that the dry land agriculture have tremendous potential for increasing farm production'. Assertion like this must be supported with literature Moreover, the author should support all his findings with adequate literature. Finally, the introduction is too small in length. He needs first to at least tell us about what risk aversion and dry land farming are. For the methodology, he needs to tell us something about the study area and research design. Also, if you say you used random sampling method for data collection, what type of random sampling did you conduct? And how did you go about it? In your study, you spoke about small, medium and large farmers were the three sources of your data. Tell us how many of each group did you sample. |                                                                                                                                                                               |
