

Editor's comments:

The case report is interesting and well written and grounded. I would just like, the authors to clarify whether testicular feminization syndrome was investigated for the patient.

Author's feedback:

Respected sir,

Pre-operatively the patient was not suspected to have a pantaloon hernia. She was clinically diagnosed to have indirect inguinal hernia. Post operatively, in view of her old age, testicular feminization was not considered or investigated, as the usual presentation of testicular feminization syndrome is early in life.
