The abstract should not have chapters, merge them into one paragraph. Avoid abbreviations like hr for hours. Line 31, key word Allannin? Where does that word come from? Line 105: Change there is therefore, to therefore there is. Line 116: Use grams instead of grammes. Grams were weighed. Check all over the article. Line 150: Egg counting instead of Counting of the egg. Check this and other expressions all over the article. Line 235-240: This information should not be placed on Discussion. Skip it as it is already on the introduction. Line 258, this was due to the fact instead of : this he attributed Line 276, remove the word "the". Change eliminate for the word remove. Line 281, instead of health of man: men's health Usually when mentioning a reference, the pattern: Author. Year. Title of the article or book. Journal name. Issue. Chapter. Pages used.	The title as it stands now is appropriate and i think that it should remain as it is. The way the abstract was written corresponds to the style of the American Journal of Experimental Agriculture as stated in the Guidelines to authors The word has been corrected to Allicin It has been changed to 'therefore there is the need to..... In Ghana we write British English and that is how they spell it The information is not the same as in the introduction; there is variation. I think the statement as it is should stand. Eliminate is a better word than remove Health of man is better than men's health
