PART 2:

FINAL EVALUATOR'S comments on revised paper (if any)	Authors' response to final evaluator's comments
1. As I previously mentioned, there are many grammatical errors that a native speaker of English would not miss. I would suggest strongly that you find a native English speaker who has experience with editing and let him or her review your paper for grammatical and stylistic issues. Right now, you have many of both issues that seriously impede comprehension. 2. You use the ESP acronym without initially explaining what it means. 3. Thank you for sending your survey instrument. There, too, grammatical errors exist. Further, you have statements that are not clear. Hence, reliability and validity might be called into question (in spite of Cronbach's alpha being .756). 4. I am not sure whether you (the author) did it or whether some technology caused it, but there are numerous spacing issues throughout the paper. If you get someone to help fix all the errors and stylistics in the paper, it will be good.	I would be so much grateful if you ask to the reviewers to send me a document with some of the suggested corrections. If I get what my Problems are, I can revise it better. I would kindly ask them to send me my errors and give the suggested corrections. I would be grateful if you do this. I have already asked my friend to Edit this and he edited the first version. I do not know which sentences or structures are wrong. I would be so much grateful if you ask them to EDIT my paper or Highlight the error ones.
