PART 2:

FINAL EVALUATOR'S comments on revised paper (if any)	Authors' response to final evaluator's comments
1. The introduction is much too long with details that most investigators in the field of dementia are aware of for example the definition of dementia 2. The distribution of the age of the caregivers and other pertinent information is still lacking. The tables included did not satisfy my concerns because I still do not have a clue how old the caregivers are or whether they are male or female. 3. There are several articles in the literature about caregivers of dementia patients in India Google caregiver dementia in India. Start with Martin Prince for example 4. There are no details about the patient population. 5. The entire section on Resilience in the introduction should be in the discussion if to be used at all. After reading the introduction the reader should know exactly why the investigation is being carried out and in its present state this is not being addressed.	I have taken total 60 caregivers as my sample randomly out of which 17 were males and remaining 43 were females. These caregivers were the family members mostly daughters, daughter-in-laws and spouses of old people. But I didn't mention this matter in article because as per other reviewer comments the article was already too length. Remaining all the corrections which you have suggested me I corrected them. Thank you very much for your valuable suggestions
