Compulsory REVISION comments	In the introductory part, it seems to me that they must describe in detail the objectives, both the general and the specific ones and, if possible, raise some hypothesis. In methodology, a statistical model should be proposed to identify the variable response in more detail, it would be good to perform an analysis of variance using the students or Fisher test. On the other hand, to annex the physical characteristics of the soil and the contents of salts present, because these variables greatly influence the behavior of the crop and movement of nutrients in the soil, as well as the type of climate, with respect to temperature, precipitation, among others. In the results and discussions I think it will be improved with the recommendation to perform an analysis of variance In conclusion, it should include the possible challenges generated in the research to generate future research.
