| Compulsory REVISION comments | Line 40. Do not use a study on mice as being relevant to human. If you want to state that palm oil does or does not have a relationship with lipids in humans, then cite a study on humans. However in lines 359-364 the safety of palm oil is stated more accurately. Line 41, there is vast evidence relating to the relationship between saturated fat and risk of IHD. The absence of such evidence from Nigeria is of no relevance. Line 387, delete homocysteine There are dozens of errors in the writing (spelling etc). It would be very helpful if the entire paper were edited by someone with good writing skills. Most importantly the entire paper needs careful revision by someone with up-to-date knowledge of the relationship between diet and CVD. This paper is a good first draft but is far from being a finished paper. | Discussion on study of mice has been deleted. Relationship between saturated fats and risk of CHD is acknowledged in the light of more recent evidence. Homocysteine has been deleted.. Spelling and Grammatical errors have been corrected Paper has been reviewed by an expert on Diet and CVD Substitution of mono or poly unsaturated oil for palm oil for cooking especially when such oils are subjected to high heat is deleted. |
