| Minor REVISION comments      | <ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1. In row 60, you say that the B lymphocytes produce IgG, but actually produce plasmatic cells. To correct.</li> <li>2. In line 87, 3 treatment categories are presented, only the first is correct.</li> <li>3. The foot tables are very long, in 1 and 2, it is better to note the significance of the abbreviations used and the reference values of the items presented.</li> <li>4. I suggest removing 4-6 tables, just mention the data in the text and note in brackets (data not shown).</li> <li>5. If possible, update references.</li> </ol> | Correction accepted and effected. The treatment categories was based on the information given by the Clinicians managing the patients. The reviewers comment is not clear. However we believe the tables were presented in acceptable format to make it easy for readers to understand. The reviewers suggestion is noted and appreciated. |
| Optional/General comments    | Overall it is a good study, it is interesting, relevant and useful.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            | We acknowledge the reviewers compliments.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |
