PART 1: Review Comments

	Reviewer's comment
Compulsory REVISION comments	The research is of great relevance for public health, mainly by addressing a issue linked to occupational health. However, portrays a local reality and failed to generalize its findings. The presentation of the manuscript leaves much to desired, mainly present as a "report" on essential parts such as the introduction of the issue. The method does not bring innovation, and the results also requires change. Placing graphics so big with too few information is completely dispensable. If the study seeks to support a hypothesis through chi-square tests should prioritize this information. The article is huge, especially the results. The conclusion is poor and does not show the manuscript contribution. The articles report having met all ethical aspects	Thank you for reviewed this manuscript. The corrections have been effected as follows: The introduction has been re-stated. Other important information about the method has been added. Presentation of the figures has been changed. The figure with line diagram for 2 points has been deleted. Conclusion has been re-stated. Thank you.
