

Editor's Comment:

I read carefully the opinions of the reviewers. According to the first reviewer, Onor Canaver, the paper demanded a major revision, and it could have been rejected if the authors did not complete the results with the statistical data. The other reviewer, Ramazan Dogen, suggested a minor revision, but only marked his comments with yellow and did not specify what should be corrected, so I could not determine whether the authors corrected what he asked for. The authors imported all the remarks of the first reviewer and corrected them, although they did not mark the corrections, so it was difficult for me to follow them. However, I think there are still grammatical errors in English. I think it would be best if the corrected paper is sent again to reviewers to see if everything is fine. I consider that since the authors corrected everything they asked for, the paper could be published in the Journal, but after confirmation by both reviewers. If you need to hear again about this paper, do not hesitate to contact me.
