Compulsory REVISION comments
Minor REVISION comments	I hope the author would consider to add somewhere that the struggle of some super power nations and their militaries to have control over the environment for global safety and comfort is good and necessary, but suicidal and totally unacceptable when it for application in wars against the others.	Many thanks for your review. Hopefully, we have made that clear in our revisions.
Optional/General comments	It is a significant input in fight of mankind for the safety of the global environment and all forms of life it supports, which is very well founded on very convincing evidence that some of the super power nations and their militaries which are prepared/preparing to fight for their self-centered nationalistic greed at the expense of the others via the would be a global scale suicidal application of nuke power against them are also preparing to fight for the same via the would also be a global scale suicidal application of the environmental weaponization intended to manipulate natural systems for performances which are no longer supportive to the living endeavours of the others.
